COMMUNICATION

To JANUS.

SIR,

I HAVE often heard of the depravity of your character, and been a witness to some most glaring acts of impropriety in your conduct; but as a human being I at least expected you would support an appearance of decency, and not shock your fellow-citizens with those unparalleled acts of impudence and atrocity which of late have so strongly marked your political career.

Pray, sir, do you view your countrymen in the light of fools or rogues?—for it can only be on this supposition that you found your present proceedings—You are so barefaced in the process of infamy, so glaringly inconsistent, that none but the weakest fools can be deceived—but if you think them rogues, no matter how exposed the roguery, you are confident in their assistance. But, sir, I flatter myself you are mistaken—that they are neither fools nor rogues—and that the day will soon come when you will be detected in your crimes and punished as they deserve. I will take a cursory review of your conduct from the revolution to the present day.

At the commencement of the war, your talents (for I acknowledge them) were strongly exerted in support of the claims of Great Britain—the justice and magnanimity of that government, her right to bind America, was the theme in which you displayed your eloquence, and the cause in which you zealously embarked. This was a gloomy period in the American history—her independence was declared—but whether she could support it, remained a doubt—You, sir, did not choose to rest your interest on so precarious a foundation—If America should be conquered, and you were a Whig, there remained no hopes of pardon to you—you, therefore, wisely chose the strongest side (as you supposed)—commenced Tory—joined the British army at New-York, and marched with it to Philadelphia. Bitter in your hatred to the American cause and people so long as their success seemed doubtful, and the British held out charms to your mercenary and sordid soul—when the tide of fortune turned and our affairs began to brighten, you tacked about, loudly declaimed against the tyranny of the British government—the vices of monarchy, and extolled the purity of republicanism. I granted above, that you possess talents—these were of a particular kind—an easy flow of words—an *elegance of expression which could gloss over the basest designs—a conscience which felt no repugnance to hypocrisy—and a disposition bent on the accumulation of self-interest, to the dereliction of every principle of honor and justice—to the sacrifice of your country. With this character so modelled to every change of circumstances, and turn of fortune—so calculated to swim when all around are sinking,—you were permitted to appear again among your injured fellow-citizens—and what is stranger still, clothed in the garb of republicanism—At this moment you appeared a true friend to your country—When the Federal Constitution was adopted, you strongly defended it, pronounced it an excellent one—When Mr. Hamilton became Secretary of the Treasury, he stood in need of an assistant—you had talents and in the line of his department—you received the appointment, and from the hands of the best of men—but I confess, you would have been the last man I would have selected—When the base enemies of Mr. Hamilton falsely accused him of misconduct in his office, and he honorably acquitted himself to the satisfaction of Congress, and then resigned his station, you dared aspire to be his successor; but the truth was the President suspected you, and justly too—it was denied. From this moment you became a Jacobin—disappointed in your expectations from government, you joined the league that planned its destruction. Dismissed from office by the President, you grew more furious than ever, and are now consecrated an exclusive patriot. But could any one believe, if he had it not from under your own hand, that a tory, a defender of kingly government, a bitter enemy to the whigs, and a republican,—could have the unpardonable impudence, in the course of a few years, to write an address to the people in support of Thomas M'Kean, a democratic candidate for the government? and that those qualifications on which you dwell as rendering Mr. M'Kean a fit person for governor, are, his having been a good whig, and now a good democrat—in having strongly opposed the British in their tyrannical oppressions of this country? Even you, sir, should blush at a review of this inconsistent and criminal conduct. If the Democrats know their own interest, they will vigilantly guard you, and repose but little confidence in your integrity—for when their cause becomes desperate, you will, true to your old maxim, turn traitor.

AN AMERICAN.

Philadelphia, May 3, 1799.

* The writer must surely mean to quiz, when he thus characterizes the hard-bound turgidity of this vapid Ass. E.

EXTRACT,

From a SERMON, Preached April 25*th*, 1799, by the Reverend ASHBEL GREEN, Pastor of the Second Presbyterian Church, in the City of Philadelphia.

"My brethren—I am not insensible that to represent the present time as worse than the past, has been the common place of writers and speakers on moral and religious subjects, at almost every period. But it will not follow, because this complaint has often been made without cause, that, therefore, there never can be a just cause for its being made. It appears to me that no person, who will allow wickedness to be that which scripture and the common use of language determine it to be, can possibly deny that the people of the United States have been increasing in wickedness, and that very rapidly, for a number of years past. More than once since I have been your pastor (which is not yet twelve years) I have said in this place, that no man would profess atheism with his lips, because it would be universally esteemed an impeachment of his understanding as well as of his heart. Such was then the fact; but it is otherwise now. I hope, indeed, there are not many among us who openly avow atheism. But I know of a certainty there are many who read with eagerness the works of those who were atheists—works that teach and defend the atheistic sentiments, and who represent the authors of these works as most profound, ingenuous, and worthy men. Not long since, it would have been considered as a singular reach of impiety to deny the providence of a God; but at present this is getting to be a fashionable practice. Some time ago a professed deist, who ridiculed the Bible and the Saviour, was regarded as a monster: At present this is rather supposed to constitute a character indicative both of wisdom and of wit, and to be no disqualification at all for a place of power and trust. There was a time in this country, at which, if Congress, without the most pressing necessity, had held a session on the Lord's day, they would have been censured from one end of the continent to the other. But into such contempt has the Sabbath now fallen, that a late occurrence of this kind has past with but very little notice.

In regard to the profanation of the name of God, the disregard to his public worship, the contempt of Gospel institutions, the neglect of family government and family religion, the dissoluteness of youth, the wanton and wicked reviling of magistrates, and the exciting of hatred against them, the cherishing of seditious practices, the opposition to the law of the country, the prevalence of duelling, the open practice of adultery and fornication, the multiplied instances of fraud and swindling, the gross and abusive attacks of private character and reputation, the devotedness of thousands to a covetous pursuit of wealth, to the neglect and disregard not only of every duty which they immediately owe to God, but also of public interest and their own private honor;—in regard to all these abominations, it is impossible to deny that they have encreased upon us, with a rapid accumulation, within a short space.

And shall I lay open the source from which this inundation of iniquity has principally flowed in upon us?—Yes, I shall do it freely, for I do not believe I should be acquitted in the sight of God if I should forbear. I offer it, then, as my most deliberate and often reviewed opinion, that this rapid increase of impiety, profligacy, and vice, has been principally owing to an enthusiastic attachment, in multitudes of people in this country, to the revolution and cause of the French. This attachment has given an easy introduction to the atheistic, infidel, and immoral principles of that people. With many it has given a sanction to these principles, which have, accordingly, been imbibed and professed even with pride and estimation. It has given a currency to the books in which these principles are taught. It has invited among us thousands of those who had already reduced these principles to practice, and whose example has been most pernicious. It has induced thousands who secretly held these principles to profess them openly; and thousands more who wished to find them true, to consider them as proved to be true, by the wisdom and practice of a great nation. It has induced even many persons of professional religion, and some, I doubt not, of real religion, to extenuate, and palliate, and excuse the awful wickedness of the people to whom I have referred, in a manner, that has had a most unhappy influence in preventing that horror that ought to be excited at such blasphemies—a horror which not to feel is itself a crime. Certain it is, that from some causes, we have come to regard, without emotion, principles and actions of impiety, which once used to shock our inmost souls, and that wickedness of all descriptions does most awfully abound."

From a London Paper.

NOTORIOUS PROFLIGACY.

John Wheeler, lately convicted of bigamy, was not of that family which so often graced the records of the Old Bailey, but the son of Dr. Wheeler, of South-street, Grosvenor-square, who gave him an education to which the tenor of his life has been an uniform disgrace.

While a student at Oxford, in December 1776, he married a very honorable young lady, Miss Mary Goodall, by whom he had a beautiful daughter. He was then only 19 years of age, and his wife no more than 16. After using this young creature in a most inhuman manner, he entered into the navy, where his friends procured him a commission in the marines, but occasionally returned, and persecuting her and her mother, by law suits and a variety of practices, extorted from that family upwards of 800l. and obliged his wife to take refuge under a different name, to avoid being farther plundered, and even murdered, as he had often threatened.

The next victim to his artifices, was a Miss Anne Yeates, who had annuity of 50l. per ann. left her as a recompence for former favors, by the brother of Sir C. W—, which our hero in vain solicited her to put into his hands; and failing to do so by any other means, he married her at Newport, after sharing in the profits of her Cyprian traffic for two years. Having thus obtained possession of her annuity, he immediately sold it, and left the poor woman to seek a precarious and infamous livelihood in the streets, which finally conducted her to her present residence in St. Mary-le-bone workhouse.

The next object that engrossed his amorous attention, was a beautiful girl of sixteen, then at boarding school, and the daughter of a major in the army, whom he prevailed upon to marry him at Lambeth. By her he has also a daughter, now about seven years of age. The partiality of this young lady for him, notwithstanding his brutal treatment of her was the same as he exercised towards others, was such, that her interference often protected him from the punishment by law, which his real wife threatened, and was willing to have inflicted.

The success of this interposition is the more to be lamented, as it enabled him to proceed further in his villainous pursuits, to which Miss W—— was a victim on the 22d of April last, when she consented to marry him at St. Bride's Church, where he assumed the name of Mr. Wentworth, which terminated his detestable career. This last enterprize required the full exercise of all his ingenuity and address. The young lady was the favorite daughter of a tradesman in Lambeth, who by his honest industry had accumulated some property. Our hero began by insinuating himself into the favor of the mother, in which he succeeded so effectually as to induce her to take private lodgings for her daughter a little distance from her own neighborhood saying she was just come from the country, and was to be visited by a captain Wentworth, to whom she was shortly to be married. She was only sixteen years of age, and her father was perfectly unacquainted with her situation till Wheeler's purpose was completely accomplished. After the marriage he strongly solicited Mr. W—— to settle one of his houses upon his daughter, which was refused, as well as the payment of 70l. for which he was soon after arrested. Making further enquiry after this hopeful son-in-law, he was in a short time informed of his real situation, and visited by three of his former wives, who produced certificates of their marriages. The wife, as well as the daughter of this much injured man, still retain their unaccountable and extraordinary attachment to Wheeler, in such a degree, that the former, in the Old Bailey Sessions before last, boldly avowed to her husband, that she was carrying 10l. to this culprit, in Newgate, for the purpose of enabling him to put off his trial. It is, however, some small consolation to this gentleman, that he has brought this egregious offender to justice, for which he is certainly entitled to the thanks of the public.

At a Court of Common Pleas held at Pittsburgh for the county of Allegheny, the first Monday of March, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and ninety nine—Before the Hon. Alexander Addison, Esq. President, John M'Dowell, John Gibson, George Thompson and George Wallace, Esqrs. Associate Judges of the same court.

ON the petition of Alexander Sumrall, a prisoner in the jail of said county, praying to be discharged according to the provisions of the act of assembly, made for the relief of insolvent debtors. The court order, that the said prisoner be brought before them at Pittsburgh, on the first Monday of June next, that his petition and his creditors may be then heard—and direct that notice of his application be published in the Gazette of the United States, and in the Pittsburgh Gazette, and continue three weeks in each, the last of which shall be at least two weeks before the time of hearing.

In two octavo volumes.

A work entirely new, original, and highly interesting; embellished with a Portrait of the head of WILLIAM PENN, and a new Map of Pennsylvania, New-Jersey, Maryland, and the State of Delaware, and parts adjacent.

IN this publication are exhibited the remarkable rise, happy progress, and extraordinary prosperity of that province, till near the time of the declared independency of the United States of America; effected by such uncommon and pacific means such singular, just and prudent policy, as appear no where in the history of nations, to have so generally, and so extensively prevailed, in any other country, to an equal degree of advancement, importance, and felicity of the people, and so generally to have excited the admiration of all observers, as in the flourishing and happy state of the province of Pennsylvania:—proper to be known and remembered by all those, who wish to be informed in the extraordinary melioration of this country, and in the means of rendering the inhabitants so happy and prosperous in former time; as well as an egregious example for posterity and surrounding states to imitate and improve upon, &c.

SALEM, April 30.

Extract of a letter from an American Gentleman on the continent of Europe, dated, Dec. 28.

"The noble declaration of our Executive, on the return of the American Envoys from France, has united all Europe, but the people of Germany in particular, even to a degree of enthusiasm. They say that the cause is noble, to oppose a nation of savages, who wish to oppress and enslave the most virtuous people on earth, and whose only crime is daring to ask for justice from the greatest monster that ever reared its head. Such sentiments have raised the Emperor, voluntarily, the greatest and most powerful army that Germany ever supported; in consequence of which, and the progress of 33,000 Russians, who are already in Germany on their way to the Rhine (being a part of 80,000 which the Emperor of Russia sends against the French) the Directory have ordered large drafts from their forces in Holland, which leaves an opening for the rebellion, which is hourly expected to become general throughout the Batavian Republic: the people of Brabant have already revolted, and are in great force; some actions have taken place between them and the French. The people of Holland are in the most dreadful state of distress imaginable: their fishermen, watermen, and all those who gained their bread by the sea, are absolutely starving; the English prevented the neutrals from going into Holland, and even a fishing boat from getting to sea, and their friends the French oppressing them by requisitions, the people are driven to perfect madness."

What generous pride, what patriotic joy must dialate the bosom of every friend to government on this decisive victory? Who that venerates the holy religion of his fathers? Who that wishes to continue under the safeguard of wise and wholesome laws? Who that deprecates the horrors of that demoralizing, brutal, and execrable system of French Liberty, which has been propagated with such demonic zeal throughout the the world? Who that is industrous, virtuous and happy, that does not feel his heart eased of the heavy burthen that had long oppressed it? Yes, our country is not lost! France! your detestable schemes—your hopes of rapine and blood are all frustrated. Levellers! you must still be in obscurity, and feel the gripe of that poverty which your idleness and your vices have brought upon you.—Enemies of the government! you are wretchedly mistaken—you must bite the lip in impotent rage—your reign is no more. Friend Edward! you see the fate that awaits you. Take a friends advice, and give out as early as possible your intentions of declining to stand the test of another Election.——Friends of the Government, of a settled and permanent state of things, we congraulate you on the favourable issue of this decisive steuggle.—Merchants of New York you have done your duty.—Citizens of every class and profession, who have contributed your aid in placing in the seats of legislation men of integrity and worth, you may now wear the honorable badge of Federalism, your activity deserves much pride, and guaantees of the future safety of your aged sires. This is a proud day of all Americans. Let it be long remembered, and when it recurs to memory let it teach the friends of government that their enemies can never triumph but when they are inactive and supine.

William B. Giles, of Virginia, is elected a member of the legislature of that State. His talents and malignant hatred to Government, are still destined to poison the sources of Legislation. We rejoice, however, that disappointment and chagrin have led him to retire from the floor of Congress, where his means of mischief were more extensive.

There is something in the French proclamation to the Neapolitans which must rouse all Europe, if she be not in a State of petrified insensibility. From Atheism, the French, by a rapid transition, are passed to Calvinism, and assert the doctrine of Election: they are now, forsooth, the elect God's chosen people, They impudently tell the surrounding nations that "the Supreme Arbiter of Empires has chosen them to renew the surface of the globe."

BETTER.

More French lies detected.

The French writer in the Argus of this morning, when they come to speak of our glorious election of yesterday, appear positively to write under the tortures of damned spirits. As the only consolation to which such wretches can resort, they betake themselves to their usual occupation of misrepresetation and abuse. Among other things they insert the following paragraph:—"The turpitude of one transaction, calls loudly for the most pointed reprobation, if true, that prisoners were taken out of the bridewell, and federal tickets being placed in their hands, they were brought up to the poll to vote."

Take the fact—One of the prisoners in the Bridewell who it seems is sometimes indulged with the liberty of being out of doors in the day time, had been sent by some of his comrades to a little shop near the place where the poll was held, to buy some rum; here he was met by one Charles Van Norden, who attended the poll as one of the French Bullies, and a vote being put into his hand for the democratic ticket, he was somehow hustled along by this man to the place of voting; just as he was entering the street door, however, he was luckily met by Mr. John M'Call, keeper of the Bridewell, whose spirited exertions yesterday, entitled him to much applause, who demanded of Van Norden what he had to do with one of his prisoners, and represented the meanness and indecency of endeavoring to procure a vote from a CRIMINAL: but it was not till after some considerable altercation, he succeeded in getting the man away without his voting at all. And now the federalists are with great propriety charged from the press, with bringing up prisoners from the Bridewell to vote!

There's nothing like plain MATTER OF FACT for these fellows; it choaks them as suddenly and as effectually as a knot under the left ear. [Com. Ad.]

PHILADELPHIA,

MONDAY EVENING, MAY 6.

Per ship Packet, Trott.

"The French have formally declared war against the Emperor of Germany and Duke of Tuscany, and have passed the Rhine."

Extract of a letter from Liverpool, 23d March, received via Boston.

"The ship Molly, of this port, is arrived at Liverpool, after having beat off three French privateers, at three different times."

Durand Maillane, said, four years ago, in the French Convention, that "already had the corruption of manners, augmented by the abuses of the Revolution, inundated the Republic with thieves and murderers." As they have been progressing and encreasing ever since in these lucrative professions, may we not by this time, without a figure of speech, rate them a nation of savages?

Democracy on its last legs.

The populous and important commercial city of New-York, has at length retrieved its character, too long lost in the predominance of a faction composed of the most depraved and loathsome wretches, that ever polluted a civilized community. The expulsion of the stock-jobbing bankrupt, Burr, is a momento mori to the Adonis, and the rest of his infamous family. In Georgia, a spirited and able Federalist (Judge Walton) has absolutely earthed the Democratic Fox, Jackson, and bids fair to scatter the forces of his consorts. The Virginian phalanx is routed and broken and even Polyphœmus, the bell-wether of the gang, hobbles forward to his seat, the "faithful public servant" of 58 constituents. We may now cheerily apply the "nati melioribus annis" of the Poet in a new sense. The prosperity of the common cause in other states, should animate us to exertions worthy of our important stake, and of which we have so laudable an example set before us. To stamp upon that abominable monster who is aspiring at a station among us where he may the more securely prowl around the state, seeking whom he may devour, the impression of public indignation, abhorrence and contempt, would be a death-wound to the cause and the influence of France in America.

Gallatin, the French patriot, from making nails, has commenced a manufactory of fire-arms. Thus verifying the remark of Dr. Johnson,

"All sciences a fasting monsieur knows,
And bid him go to hell to hell he goes."

We hear that two thousand stands of arms are to be furnished the Commonwealth from the manufactory at New Geneva, and that Albert took care to get his money betimes.

It is said the settlement of a well-known and disgraced Paymaster's accounts, would have a very sickly effect upon two pair of fine horses, a coachee and chariot. Vive la souveraineté du peuple.

The hurry duke Albert was in to get his money for the fire-arms, is an indication of suspicions of the short duration of the occasion for them. It were odd, indeed, if a man should not know the progress of his own works; but what are we to think of the Excellence that connived at so gross a depredation on the public?

Nearly two-thirds of the 44 Lyonnois have been expelled from Congress.

Here we have one evidence at least that the mass of the people entertain a higher sense of honor than a delegate portion of them.

The following is an accurate state of the Virginia Election for Members of Congress:

FEDERAL RETURNS.

Col. Parker, T. Evans, Esq. } Re-elected.
Col. L. Powell
Gen. John Marshall
Samuel Goode, Esq.
Robert Page, Esq.
E. Gray, Esq.
Gen. Henry Lee
Col. George Hancock.

DEMOCRATIC.

Citizens Nicholas, Dawson, Eggleston, Clay, New and Cabell, re-elected. Randolph, vice Venable.

There will be, in the next Congress, on the most moderate computation, seventy odd Federal members.

Citizen David Holmes is re-elected.

A letter from the district represented in the last congress by Mr. Machir, dated on the morning of the election, confirms what have already stated of the prospect of Major Haymond's success.

The district mis-represented by Holmes, is as federal as any in the state—and there is a prospect of that miserable tool's obtaining leave of absence for the two ensuing years.

The district represented by J. Trigg is the only other from which the returns yet remain to be received. Here there is little hope of any amendment.

Samuel J. Cabell was opposed by a young gentleman of fine talents and the soundest principles, unfortunately wearing the disgraced name of John Nicholas.

One Mitchell appears on the despised democratic ticket, at New-York, left by a thousand votes, in arrear. Is this the Doctor, who tells us that the Yellow Fever springs up out of the ground? And is Mitchillianism so soon fallen into disrepute?

ON A PUBLIC DEFAULTER.

Long D—— had toil'd for a party ungrateful—
But on France tho poor wight still rely'd—'lack a day!
Till at length in reward for this miscreant most hateful,
They made him Paymaster, himself for to pay.

The following invocation to Marcus Brutus, extracted from a Tennessee gazette, is the unguarded production of one of those enthusiastic young fry of treachery that providence sometimes sends into existence to mar villainy, and develope the hidden machinations of faction. This youthful traitor tells a bold tale, with an undaunted countenance. He does not, like Harmodious and Aristogiton conceal his murderous weapon in wreathes of myrtle, but like the more audacious Grachus brandishes it in the capital. Will any person suppose after perusing the "Democrat" that the ideas and sentiments therein contained, are not familiar and common to the whole circle of his associates; to the body of M'Laughlins subscribers; and indeed to the chief of the inhabitants of that seditious quarter of the union: would he not otherwise tremble to avow them? Incautious as he is, would he be content to become the solitary victim of his own solitary, silly, and treasonable opinion? Never: No, no, he is confident that every wretch who moistens his lips with the waters of Tennessee is intoxicated with the same blood craving mania. Assassins loom round his daily haunts, ripe for treason, stratagem and crime, were they but assured of impunity. But though they pant for the blood of Adams, Washington and every wise and virtuous man in the community; yet they teach their tongues concealment and endeavor by democratic finesse, by falsehood, intrigue, and probationary outrage to bring on the harvest of their wishes. They play round the flame of sedition but are very cautious how they singe their wings. On the contrary, this revolutionary fanatic not being so well read in those matters relative to the safety of his party as he appears to be in its sentiments and principles fiercely hurls defiance into the very teeth of the constituted authorities and the laws of his country: Calls for "daggers" selects his victims, and chuckles with savage pleasure as he sees them, in imagination, "stagger" beneath his blows. Thus, by trusting to a muse-struck murtherer the fatal secret, all their views and expectations are completely unmasked. The Northampton insurrection was too early for their purpose; and this canibal song is considered by them as premature; but in both we see evidences of the same spirit; the tendency of both is the same, to "disannul the constitution" and to deluge the country in blood. Whether this unadvised devulgement of their friend will hasten the execution of their plan is difficult to foresee; but at all events, the friends of government should be prepared for the worst. To have an official head is necessary to the effectual organization of the Democrats of Pennsylvania: give them this and their co-operation with their brethren of Tennessee will immediately follow. They will then without blush or remorse acknowledge their purpose, and perhaps execute it before the inactive inhabitants can be brought to believe there are such fiend-like beings in existence. Men, therefore, who regard their lives and property as worth preserving, should labour night and day to secure to themselves a Governor at the next election, whose vigilence and resolution will shelter them from the storm of anarchy which, if it should burst upon us, no regrets can appease, no prayers deprecate.

O! thou ghost of Marcus Brutus!
O! thou dread immortal shade!
Thou whose spirit now would suit us,
Raise thy once tremendous head!
Rise, and shake thy vengeful dagger,
Wet with Cæsar's haughty blood!
Petty Despot!—see them stagger!
Hear the pious call on God!
Rise thou wond'rous ancient Roman,
To the right let thunders roar.
O! the blest propitious Omen!
'Kings shall rule the earth no more!"
How we need so rare a spirit,
In Columbia's western climes!
Truth has lost her former merit.
And corruption rules the times!
Columbia once the wonder,
Of admiring nations 'round;
She, who smil'd at British thunder,
In venality is drown'd.
She, has lost her sense of honour,
She, is sunk supinely low;
Whilst a generous few bemoan her,
She's insensible of woe,
She, has lost her sense of honour;
She, from bad, to worse descends.
She, lets Britannia ride upon her—
And is forc'd to fight her friends.
Here, are Cæsars, noble Junius;
Here, are Despots, to be slain!
Here, are Kings, who importune us!
Here, are Fools, who wish to reign.
We are pleas'd with adulation;
Honesty is out of date:
Lies and vile dissimulation,
Reign supreme in every State.
We place our happiness in splendour—
All our glory in parade;
Our real freedom we surrender,
Well contented with the shade.
Freedom was our former glory,
All devoted to her cause,
Now,—Constitution, is the story,
And Obedience, to the laws.
Freedom's ways are disrespected,
We alas! no more are brave!
And a Monarch, is expected—
Sure a King should rule a slave.
We execrate a Revolution;
We are pleas'd with ancient forms:
'God preserve our Constitution!
'From wild Democratic storms!'
Here is my ejaculation:
Here a Patriot's fervant prayer:
Send! O send Regeneration!
Purify our Morbid air!
Purify, our sickly nation!
Abrogate our musty laws!
Send! O! send Regeneration!
Succour Lord a righteous cause!
Disannul our Constitution,
Do away, our Penal laws,
From a purer Institution,
Suited to a purer cause.
Wash away each foul pollution,
Each Despotic cursed frain;
Send us Lord, a Revolution!
And let freedom live again.
Raise the Bill of feign'd sedition,
All its evils do away;
Send the makers to perdition,
So let every patriot pray.
Build a hell of fierce Damnation,
For our Demi-British clan—
Send, to the rest O God! salvation,
Bless them with the Rights of Man.

Copy of a letter from Mr. S. B. Davis, first mate of the ship Gen. Washington, of this port, to his owner, dated on board the Lynn sloop of war, April 21, 1799.

SIR,

I HAVE only time to inform you, that we were taken by the Lynx and Pheasant, on the 14th inst. off the Hole-in-the-Wall, and are bound to Bermuda. We had separated from the Star some time before, in a gale of wind; but she was in sight when we were taken, and I suppose is in New-Providence, as there was a brig of 18 guns in sight, belonging there, and they send in all vessels they meet.

[It appears by the following article, that the ship Star, mentioned in the above letter, has escaped:]

Capt. W. Odlin, of the brig Rambler, from Hunduras, on the 16th ult. spoke the ship Star, George, of and from this port, bound to New-Orleans, then in lat. 24, 50, near Martin's Reef, Cape Sable bearing N. N. W. Capt. George informed that he had parted company with the Gen. Washington a few days before in a gale of wind.

M. Sullivan, a seamen on board the Birmingham Packet, in attempting to land to the wharf, on Saturday morning, from the ship, missed his step, and was drowned, notwithstanding every assistance was immediately given.

PROPOSALS,

BY THE

Insurance Company of North America.

For INSURANCE against FIRE, on Dwelling-Houses, Ware-Houses, and other Buildings (and on Goods contained in such Buildings) distant from Philadelphia, in the United States.

I. Common Insurances, on hazards of the first class, will be undertaken at a premium of about half per cent. per annum. For extra hazardous risques a larger premium will be required, which will vary according to circumstances, seldom exceeding one per cent. per annum; but in some instances, where the property insured is not only in itself extra hazardous, but rendered still more so by the vicinity of extra hazardous buildings and occupations, the premium demanded will be raised according to circumstances.

Houses and Ware-Houses, the walls and partitions of which are wholly of stone or brick, well constructed, so as to be guarded as well as may be against fires from within, and free from extra hazardous buildings and occupations in their neighborhood, will be deemed hazardous of the first class, and may be insured to their full value.

Also Goods and Merchandize, not of an extra hazardous kind, in casks, bales, or packages, deposited in such buildings, to an amount not exceeding 4000 dollars; but if more than this sum is required to be insured in one tenement, an additional premium will be required, in proportion to circumstances.

II. Insurances will also be made on buildings and goods extra hazardous, at premiums proportioned to the risque. But it is not easy to arrange these under particular heads or classes, so as to describe each with the necessary accuracy. Each case must therefore be decided upon according to the circumstances attending it; and these circumstances will, in general, appear from the description accompanying the application.

Buildings partly constructed of brick or stone, are preferable to those wholly wooden. And in both cases, the stile of building, how they are occupied, how they are situated, the neighboring buildings, and how occupied, are considerations to be taken into view. And with respect to goods, their tendency, whether from their nature, or from the manner in which they are exposed, either to commence or to increase an accidental fire, and their liability in such state to receive damage by wet, or by sudden and hasty removal, or to be stolen in time of confusion and hurry, are all circumstances of weight; and the premiums must be proportioned accordingly.

III. The following conditions are to be understood by the parties.

1st. The Insurance is not binding till the stipulated premium be paid; but it shall be deemed effectual from the time of such payment and acceptance thereof, whether the policy be immediately signed or not.

2d. Insurances may be renewed at the expiration of the term of the policy, without further expenses than the payment of the premium of the renewed term, the circumstances continuing the same as they were understood by the insurers at the time the former insurance was made; but the payment of the premium is essential to such renewal; and if the party insured suffers any time to elapse after the expiration of the former insurance, before he pays a premium for the renewal, he is not insured during such time; nor can the insurance be renewed on the former policy but by computing the commencement of the renewal from the expiration of the former insurance. The subject of insurance may nevertheless be open to treaty for a new insurance.

3d. If any other insurance be made on the same property; it must be made known at the time of application, otherwise the policy made on such application will be void.

4th. Goods held in trust, or on consignment, may be insured as such in a separate policy; but they are not to be considered as insured otherwise.

5th. This company will not be liable or accountable for any loss or damage occasioned by any foreign invasion, or by any military or usurped forces, by reason of any civil commotion; or occasion, or by gunpowder, aquafortis or other thing of the like kind kept in the building, or amongst the property insured.

6th. Bills of Exchange, Bonds and other Securities, Title Deeds, Money, Bank and other promissory Notes, are not included in any insurance; nor are paintings, medals, jewels, gems, antique curiosities, or mirrors exceeding the value of twenty-five dollars each, to be considered as insured unless particularly mentioned and by special agreement.

7th. No insurance will be made for a shorter term than one year, nor for a longer term than seven years. Persons choosing to insure for seven years shall be allowed one year's premium by way of discount: One third of a years premium shall be abated in like manner on an insurance for three years.

8th. Losses sustained by fire on property insured, shall be paid in thirty days after due proof and liquidation thereof, without deduction.

A description of the property to be insured will be expected with each application, to be made by a master carpenter and signed by him, as well as by the owner of the building or applicant for insurance, and attested before a Notary or principal Magistrate, who will certify his knowledge of the parties and their credibility.

With respect to Houses and other Buildings.

1st. The site and position; describing the street or road on or near which the building stands; its contiguity to water, and other circumstances relative to the extinguishment of fire in case of accident; and particularly whether any and what fire companies are established, and engines provided, in the place or neighbourhood.

2d. The materials of which it is built, whether of brick, stone or wood, and what part of each, as well as to the outside walls as inside or partition walls, and their respective height and thickness; the style of the roof and of what materials; how secured by battlements or party walls; what kind of access to the top of the house and to the chimnies; whether any and what electric rods; the number and kind of fire places; and the kind of deposit for ashes.

3d. The dimensions of the building and how divided, and the style in which it is finished so as to enable indifferent persons to judge in what manner it is to be repaired or rebuilt in case of injury; the age and condition of the building, and how occupied, whether merely as a dwelling house, or for any other, and for what purpose; also an estimate of the value of the house or building independent of the ground.

4th. The situation with respect to other buildings or back buildings, whether adjoining or not, comprehending at least one hundred feet each way: what kind of buildings are within that distance, how built, of what materials, and how occupied or improved, whether as dwellings for private families or otherwise: whether any and what trade or manufactory is carried on, and particularly whether there be any extra hazardous articles used, or usually deposited in the house, or within the distance aforesaid, and of what kind.

Respecting goods in Houses, Warehouses, &c.

1. A general description of the building in which they are kept will be expected, similar in all respects, as to the danger from fire, with that required for Insurance on the buildings themselves.

2. A description of the kinds and nature of the goods, whether in casks or other packages, or opened; and whether displayed in whole pieces or in the usual form for retailing. And if the goods vary materially in kind, a general estimate of the value of each kind proposed to be insured; but in the last particular minuteness of description is not expected.

3. Articles of the following kinds are deemed extra hazardous, though in various degrees, in whatever building they may be placed, viz. pitch, tar, turpentine, rosin, wax, tallow, oil, inflammable spirits, sulphur, hemp, flax, cotton, dry goods of an inflammable kind, opened.—Glass, china ware or procelain, especially unpacked; Looking glasses, jewelery; and all other articles more than commonly inflammable, or more than commonly liable to injury by sudden removal or by moistures, or particularly obnoxious to theft on an alarm of fire.

Letters post paid, directed to the Secretary of the Board of Directors, will be duly attended to. An order for Insurance accompanied by the means of paying the premium, will be immediately executed on the premium being paid. If the application contain an enquiry only, is will be answered.

By order of the Board,

Ebenezer Hazard, sec'ry.

Office of the Insurance Company of North America; Philad. Feb. 1, 1798.
